Michele counsels clients in the long term care and senior living industries on transactional matters, including development projects, acquisitions, and the structuring of joint venture, lease and management arrangements. Michele also advises long term care and senior living clients on operational issues, including licensure, transfer of operations, and regulatory compliance.

Michele also works with investors and other types of health care providers, including hospitals, home health agencies, hospices and physician practices, in their transactional and real estate matters, including formation and licensure, stock and asset purchase transactions, restructuring, and mergers and acquisitions of health care facilities.

Michele advises long term care and senior living facilities, hospitals, home health agencies, hospices, laboratories and other health care providers regarding regulatory and corporate compliance, including state licensure, Medicare and Medicaid, federal and state fraud and abuse issues, physician self-referral, HIPAA, health privacy and security, and corporate practice of medicine.

Previous Work

Michele previously worked as an associate in the health care practice of a New Jersey law firm, where she assisted hospitals, home health providers, hospices, medical and dental practices, and physicians in their regulatory and transactional matters.
